Once I was walking in the hallway early at school. While walking I saw a huge backpack in the way. It was so big it started moving it moved closer and closer to me. I was like awesome. 5 minutes later I went to open the backpack but nothing was in it so I turned around and I saw a nother huge backpack. I started to freak out. So I started running down the hallway and the way there I saw another huge backpack. Last, I ran outside. Guess what I saw another huge backpack. Finally I said "I give up" then a bunch of boys and girls came out and taked me and said "you're it".

Score Point: 3

This response reflects a limited degree of proficiency in narrative writing skills. There are few errors in mechanics, usage, and sentence structure. The writer organizes the response through time, using effective transitional phrases (once I was walking, five minutes later, and finally). However, key ideas lack illustration and development, and the narrative is somewhat repetitious. The conclusion seems unrelated to the story. Further development is required for a higher score.
